Proposed Lowe's of Dennis Withdrawn from Cape Cod Commission Review

May 9th Hearing Cancelled

*All Materials and Comments Submitted to CCC Public Record for the Original Application
Will Be Carried Forward to the Public Record for the Resubmittal Application*

BARNSTABLE, MA – The Cape Cod Commission today voted to accept the request of Lowe's Home Centers, Inc., to withdraw the company's application for a Development of Regional Impact (DRI) permit to construct a proposed new facility in Dennis, Massachusetts. The Commission accepted the withdrawal without prejudice, meaning that the company may re-file an application at any time.

The vote also requires the Commission to cancel the public hearing on the original application, which had been scheduled for Thursday, May 9, 2013, at 6:00 p.m. at the Wixon School in Dennis. When the company files its resubmittal application and that application is deemed complete, the Commission will schedule a new hearing with public notice.

The company has stated its intention to resubmit an application very soon after withdrawing the original "as the reason for the withdrawal is simply...to prepare and file traffic study information." The Cape Cod Commission therefore intends to carry forward all materials and comments that were submitted to the public record for the original application to the public record for the resubmittal application. Those who made such comments and filed materials previously are reminded of several important points, however:

- The resubmittal application could be different from the original, so commenters will want to review the application materials again in case they wish to change their original comments; and
- They will need to inform the Cape Cod Commission staff explicitly if they wish to withdraw any of their original comments.

Information about the proposed Lowe's of Dennis project DRI review may be found on the Cape Cod Commission's web site:
