The draft RPP clearly doesn't address the current climate crisis. In light of recent stark warnings from scientists, the Commission, as our regional planning group needs to take a much more active role in mitigation strategies. Opportunities abound in the areas of new construction, re-construction of older large projects, solid waste management, and transportation to name a few. The Commission's emphasis on mitigation can help the entire region take this threat as seriously as it needs to be taken. Perhaps, a separate section on mitigation would serve to give this topic the attention it deserves. I would also request that our energy goals be much more focused on renewable energy, for that is one of the most direct, measurable ways to reduce our dependence on fossil fuels. I offer these brief comments with appreciation for the important role you fulfill on the Cape, and the leader you can be in the climate crisis that threatens this fragile area.
